

W. H. Taft is famous. He is known around the world. His presidential campaign in the United States at this time is premier. This condition is solely due to Taft himself. But there is nothing like having a good press agent and in his presidential campaign the general secretary of war has the prize of the first water. His name is Arthur I. Vorys. Vorys is 51 years of age. He was a wood turner by trade. One day when working on a machine one of his hands was drawn in the machinery and all but one of the fingers cut off. This accident was the turning point in his career. Unable to work as a machinist he turned his attention to the study of law, and later became a practicing lawyer. In 1881 he was elected city solicitor of Lancaster, Pa., and served in that office for four years. This latter step into politics whetted his appetite. Successfully passing through the stages of city and county politics he plunged in the Ohio state campaign of 1889 and was made state superintendent of insurance by Governor Zaeh. Vorys held this place through the administration of four governors. Now he is Taft's official boomer. He can see nothing but absolute victory for the secretary of war. "At this time," he says, "Secretary Taft's nomination for president is as certain as anything can be in politics. Every straw vote, every poll, in fact, every expression of the popular sentiment that has been had, has shown that Taft is the first choice of the republicans of every state, save those having 'favorite sons,' and that he is overwhelmingly the second choice of the republicans of every 'favorite son' state.

"Secretary Taft's personal character and temperament, his long experience in national affairs, his position on all public questions, his frankness and courage in discussing those questions and his identification with the progressive policies of President Roosevelt's administration, which have won for such universal approval, have won for Ohio's candidate general recognition as the most desirable and most available candidate for 1908. That his nomination will carry with it the assurance of victory at the polls is a consideration that cannot and does not escape thoughtful party men."

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

"In courts of law the phrase 'I believe' has no standing. Never a witness gives testimony but he is cautioned thus: 'Tell us what you know; not what you believe.'"

"In theology, belief has always been regarded as more important than that which your senses may be so."

"Almost without exception 'belief' is a legacy, an importation—something borrowed—an echo."

"The creed of the future will begin 'I know,' not 'I believe.' And this creed will not be forced upon people. It will carry with it no coercion, no blackmail, no promise of an eternal life of idleness and ease if you accept it, and no threat of hell if you doubt."

"It will not organize itself into a system, marry itself to the state, and call on the police for support." It will be so reasonable, so in the line of self-preservation, that no sane man or woman will reject it."

After thus commenting on creeds, Robert Hubbard of the Philistine, submits the following:

"I know, that I am here. In a world where nothing is permanent but change. And that in a degree I can change the form of things. And influence a few people. And that I am influenced by those and other people."

"That I am influenced by the example and by the work of men who are no longer alive. And that the work I now do will in a degree influence people who may live after my life has changed into other forms."

"That a certain attitude of mind and habit of action on my part will add to the peace, happiness and well being of other people. And that a different thought and action on my part will bring pain and discord to others. And that if I would secure reasonable happiness for myself, I must give out good will to others."

"That to better my condition I must practice mutual aid."

"That bodily health is necessary to continued and effective work."

"That I am largely ruled by habit."

"That habit is a form of exercise."

"That up to a certain point, exercise means strength or ease in effort."

"That all life is the expression of spirit."

"That my spirit influences my body."

"And my body influences my spirit."

"That the universe to me is very beautiful, and anything and everybody in it good and beautiful."

"When my body and my spirit are in harmonious mood."

"That my thoughts are hopeful and helpful unless I am filled with fear."

"And that to eliminate fear my life must be dedicated to useful work—work in which I forget self. And that the reward which life holds out for work is not idleness, nor rest, nor immunity from work, but increased capacity, greater difficulties, more work."

Hubbard is an erratic thinker and a more erratic writer, but his creed sparkles with common sense and every proposition has back of it knowledge and not belief. What he says about theological creeds is true. The accident of birth determines very largely our religious beliefs.

The day has passed when it is popular to condemn a man to everlasting punishment, because he does not endorse some particular creed.

"Freedom of thought" is the slogan of the day, and it involves the field of theology, demanding a reason for many things which have long been taken for granted.

The church looks on in dismay and deplorable conditions, but the fact remains and must be recognized and met.

A union revival meeting was held, not long ago, at a suburban town near Chicago. Converts were numerous and free to join the church of their choice.

A number of young men called on the pastor of a certain church and told him that they would be pleased to hand in their names for membership, but they understood that the creed prohibited certain amusements which they regarded innocent.

On being advised that it was so, they turned away with the statement that they could not subscribe to a creed which invaded the domain of individual conscience on questions of expediency.

It may be argued that these boys were not converted, but that is begging the question. A change of heart means a change of purpose and the determination to lead a better life. It usually means identification with some church for mutual happiness, but intelligent people are slow to subscribe to a creed which they do not endorse.

In the case referred to, the church in question gained four accessions, while two hundred or more found homes in a less rigid atmosphere.

This is an age of progress rather than an age of creeds. Men pass for what they are, and not for what they believe. The theology of many good people, both in and out of the church, is peculiar.

They are less concerned about the future than about the present, for the work in hand is so important that it absorbs time and thought. They realize that the work of life, if done at all, must be done now.

The banker and financier of New York, overcome by grief over losses, which would come to other people, through his failure, shot himself a few days ago.

An effort was made to save his life by an operation, but before he was placed on the table attorneys were called in and for an hour and a half he dictated his will, providing for loved ones; then the anesthetic was administered and he passed on to meet the future with no apparent dread or apprehension.

The age is also optimistic, and in spite of the present prosperity panic, men are hopeful and planning for the future as though nothing had happened.

The great tidal wave of reform which has swept over the country has caused more or less disaster, but, in its wake appears a quickened conscience, and the standard of public morality is higher today than ever before.

Business methods of long standing have been revised and many things that seemed right are pronounced wrong.

The cause of prohibition has received a wonderful impetus, not because of any special effort on the part of the prohibition party, which is weaker today than ever before, but because the law and order sentiment of the country has been aroused.

Manufacturers and employers of labor have aided in the campaign, and the man who drinks today is branded as an undesirable employee.

While the church may be responsible, indirectly, for this reform movement, it is not a church campaign, and no particular creed claims the credit.

The "golden rule" and the "square deal" is the nation's creed today, and President Roosevelt more than any other man or organization, is entitled to credit for changed conditions.

He may have made some mistakes, but his heart is right and no man questions his honesty of purpose. His name will live for many generations as the man whose creed was the "square deal."

THE TWO TEAMS BATTLING

Boys from up the Line Came Down Ready to Wallop Locals

At the Athletic park this afternoon the crucial game of the season between the teams of the Janesville and Fort Atkinson high schools is being fought out. The Fort arrived at 12:50 over the North-Western, attended by over a hundred rooters and a brass band. For the last six years Janesville has been overwhelmed by the up-

Dr. Alonso Clark: "A substance (alum) which can derange the stomach should not be tolerated in baking powder."
 Prof. S. W. Johnson, Yale College: "I regard their (alum and soluble alumina salts) introduction into baking powders as most dangerous to health."

Last year the Lower City team, after winning every game they played, were conquered by the Atkinson boys after a fierce contest, 11 to 5.

This year Janesville has a comparatively heavy team, although Fort Atkinson may have a slight advantage in this. Both the teams have stubborn defenses. But the offensive styles are entirely different. The Fort has its attack built almost entirely around its star fullback, Messelt, varied at times by fake and trick plays. Janesville, on the other hand, depends on brilliant interference and team-work for effective gains. The game promises to be hotly contested.

A mass-meeting was held in the high school last night, to practice new songs and yells. Over 300 of the students excited themselves to a high pitch of enthusiasm and excitement.

Rev. R. C. Denison and Rev. R. M. Vaughan Will Talk on Vital Topics.

Sunday evening the Rev. R. C. Denison will lecture upon "The Drama of Job" at the Congregational church, this being the third lecture of a series on great problems of life which Mr. Denison chose for his Sunday evening sermons during November. "The book of Job is one of the great poems of literature and has been called the epic of the inner life. It is concerned in a very human way with the deep and difficult problem of suffering and shows how the mastery of pain was solved for one man."

The fundamental questions of life will be considered in a free and practical way in a series of Sunday evening addresses by the Rev. R. M. Vaughan at the Baptist church commencing November 17—tomorrow night.

NEW YARDS WILL BE DONE IN JANUARY

Work on North-Western Assorting Yards and New Roundhouse Progressing Well.

It will be a little after the first of the year before the new assorting yards of the North-Western company south of the city, will be put into service. It was thought for a while that the yards would be ready for use by at the present yards, will have charge of this new thirty-stall house and David Griffin, yardmaster of the present up-town yards, will be in charge of the yard work. They will move their forces of men to the new yards as soon as the same are completed and they receive orders from headquarters in Chicago. A watering station and a coal shed have also been erected at the yards to supply the locomotives.

A feature of the roundhouse will be the large stationary asbestos engine "jacks" which have been erected over this morning after being repaired in the local roundhouse.

Conductor Will Sage went to Chicago this morning.

SWITCH-ENGINE ON ST. PAUL PASSENGER DERAILED HERE

Locomotive on North McGregor Train Left Track in Local Yards

Last Night.

Engine 775 on the North McGregor passenger train split a switch while coming into the local yards last evening at 7 o'clock from the north and was derailed. The engine ran over 100 feet on the ground before Engineer Tuttle could bring it to a stop. The train was brought up by a switch-engine on another track to the passenger depot, where the passengers were let off. The derailed engine was put back on the rails by the aid of the switch-engine and was run into the roundhouse at 9 o'clock. It was sent out on a freight train this morning.

A force of some three hundred men has been at work on the new yards since last May, when the construction work was Johnson & Son, of Chicago, the contractors for the thirty-stall roundhouse, and Hayes Brothers, of Janesville, in charge of the grading of the yards, have had considerable trouble in keeping their laborers at work. Now men go to work and others quit every day. Thirty new laborers arrived at the yards this morning to take the place of a score and a half of others who had quit in the last day or two, and so it goes.

In connection with the roundhouse are the store room, the oil house, the storeroom, the boiler room, machine shop, casting room, blacksmith shop and roundhouse foreman's office, all under the same roof together with the roundhouse. E. H. Zieker, foreman of the roundhouse

CAPTAIN BIGELOW-YALE

Yale this week is in the crucial period of its 1907 football series. Today it meets Princeton, which is fresh from a decisive 14-0 victory over the Carlisle Indians and follows on November 23 with the annual game against Harvard. These two games are the features of the eastern football season.

In the game which follows on November 23 between Yale and Harvard, Yale has the advantage again on paper. Harvard's goal has been crossed three times by minor schools. Yale and Harvard have met but one adversary in common, namely Springfield, and while Harvard was fighting out a desperate victory by the score of 9 to 5 Yale won handily by a score of 18 to 0.

Yale's captain is sturdy right tackle Bigelow. He is shown herewith on the famous Yale fence. Bigelow is typically a Yale football product. During his prep school at Lawrenceville he failed to even make a place on the minor aggregation.

Ship Eastward: C. J. Jones & Sons shipped three cars of leaf tobacco eastward today.

Players Go Through: Members of the East Division high school of Milwaukee football team passed through here this morning en route to Monroe where they played this afternoon against the Monroe team over which Janesville triumphed last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis McLaughlin entertained a company of friends at their home on South Main street Thursday evening.

CHARLEY BAIRD

Charley Baird has been the active managing force in University of Michigan athletics for years. Each football season sees the production of his office on some football innovation. The year of the famous 50-0 team Baird took the Michigan warriors to the Pacific coast for a Christmas game with Lehigh Stanford, which seemed to demonstrate the superiority of middle western football from the game played in the regions farther west. This year Director Baird semi-officially announced that if the Michigan team wins the Michigan-Pennsylvania game on Perry field today the Wolverine players will in all likelihood make another western tour. If this results not only will Michigan play Lehigh Stanford again, but also the winner of the Ohio-Colorado battle for the championship of the Rocky mountain states. St. Vincent college at Los Angeles will also be considered as a possible antagonist, resulting from the fact that Los Angeles people have wired that they will raise a guaranteed fund for a game with St. Vincent.
